Caro Imperiale Fosse, voi vedendo firmato dal commalvano il disp.o di ricevuta del vostro rap.to di N.o 267, confidenziale avete pensa-to che quel rap.to non fosse stato messo sotto gli occhi del Ministro. Invece, esso fu man-dato al Ministro, il quale inoltre non l'ha ancora restituito, occupato e preoccupato com'è delle discussioni in Parlamento della legge sulla emigrazione. Appunto poi perchè il vostro rap.to non era di quelli ordinari, io dispoche ci si facesse subito una risposta di ricevuta e siccome essa d'indole confiden-ziale, nella risposta si accen-nò solamente a quella parte del rap.to che innocua-mente poteva esporre sua indiscrezione. Di regola il Ministero non accusa ricevuta di rapp.ti ordinari sono anche politici, ma lo fa quando si tratta di rapp.ti di speciale im-portanza come era il vostro.

Dopo queste spiegazioni io spero che ogni vostro dubbio sarà dissipato e sarete tornato tranquillo.

Come l'amico Cantagalli vi ha scritto, io spenderò volentieri e sempre l'opera mia per giovarvi in qualche modo; ma il male sta che qui non vogliono sentire a parlare di movimento sia per economia, sia per non avere gratta-capo. Ma voi avete mille ragioni da vendere perchè la vostra condizione sia pure migliorata, ed io m'auguro che faccian-

no per contentarmi perchè lo mentote. Speriamo che al posto del povero De Bonzis non si mandi un estraneo alle carriere ciò sarebbe il colmo!
Se così non avviene è sperabile che nel movimento che de-riverà per provvedere al posto di Londra, non venga fuori qualche combinazione che ci possano giovare! Amen!

In tutte le confidenze dello duce che cominciando se no tutti al M.re abbiamo rice-vuto una dolorosa impressione nel rivedere il bravo Contagalli in tali condizioni di salute, che certamente, non sono nè liete nè promettenti.
Egli ha un certo movimento nervoso speriamo che parta dal collo, dalla testa e si comunica al braccio destro, che fa proprio pena
a vedere: neanche il volto e quello di un sano e in tutte le persone di nostre Stanze, per non dire affranto... Speriamo bene ma, a parer mio, egli avrebbe fatto meglio a chiedere di essere messo a disposizione a restare in Italia a casa sua e curarsi bene.... Ad ogni modo voglio augurarmi che guarisca bene e presto.

Ed ora di stringere
le mani e medie

perchè mandino un

The Italian Fleet and the Porte.

A communication which has been issued by the Stefani Agency explains semi-officially the concentration at Gaeta of a powerful Italian fleet. It sails to-day for Turkish waters in order to lend weight to certain demands which Italy has made upon the PORTE, and, if necessary, to take such action in support of them as may be required. There are few pages in the history of Italy during the Middle Ages which are of deeper interest than those which tell of the commanding position which her merchant-statesmen acquired in the Levant. The close intercourse which they kept up between the East and the West was to a large extent the foundation of the commercial greatness of the Italian Republics, and of the wonderful civilization which those communities developed and imparted to the whole European world. The Italians of to-day look back with filial pride upon the achievements of their great forefathers in the East, and feel a natural ambition to tread in their footsteps and to restore, in accordance with modern conditions, the relations to which their country once owed so much of her prosperity and her greatness. For a considerable time past they have been working quietly with this end. They do not aim at anything more for the present than to "take their place in the "sun" with other Western nations in regions where their ancestors long enjoyed an undisputed monopoly. Their present representative at the PORTE, the MARCHESE IMPERIALI, shares to the full upon this subject the patriotic aspirations of his countrymen. He has exerted himself since he went to Constantinople to awaken Italian residents in the Levant to a sense of their historic position, and he has encouraged them to assert it. He has sought and obtained concessions for them; he has opened Italian lay-schools at Smyrna and Salonika, and he has furthered the unwearying efforts of the Dante Alighieri Society to make Italian once again one of the great languages of the Levant. He has received very valuable support in these attempts from a somewhat unexpected quarter. The quarrel between the French Government and the Roman Catholic Church has caused the Vatican to withdraw from France the rights which she formerly possessed over the Italian missions in the Near East. These missions, with their schools, are now under the protection of their own Government, and the Italian Ambassador at Constantinople enjoys and exercises in regard to them the honorary privileges formerly conceded to his French colleague.

The Powers, we need hardly say, have long established post-offices of their own nationalities in the Turkish dominions. There are something like thirteen foreign post-offices and sub-offices in the capital; there are five at Smyrna, and there are others in Jerusalem, Salonika, and other important towns. The Italians, who form considerable colonies in some of these towns, think that the time has come for them to demand a right which they possess by treaty equally with others, and of which their numbers fully justify the exercise. They appear to have informed the PORTE of their intention so to exercise it a considerable time ago, but they did not press the matter until the end of March, when the Ambassador in Constantinople gave the PORTE a verbal intimation that Italy intended forthwith to open post-offices in the capital and at Avlona, Salonika, Smyrna, and Jerusalem. The PORTE replied that this step could not be permitted, and alleged that an understanding existed with Italy that it should not be taken. The Italians replied, in a Note of April 9, that the right of Italy to take the step is indisputable under the most-favoured-nation clause in her treaties with Turkey, and they denied the existence of the alleged understanding. A few days later the PORTE answered, in a further Note, that it had issued positive orders that the post-offices should not be opened. Various officials explained to the Ambassador, at the same time, that these orders were to the effect that armed guards should be stationed before the post-office buildings to prevent by force the public from entering them. This brought matters to a head. The Italian Government forthwith resolved to despatch the fleet. When the ships reach their destination it will issue, we are told, a simultaneous Note to the Powers and to the PORTE, which will set out its grievances against Turkey with regard to the post-offices "and in "other matters," wherein, it affirms, the PORTE has wrongfully prejudiced the rights of Italy. It is believed that these "other matters" include the treatment of Italian subjects and their Arab customers in Tripoli, the refusal of Turkey to allow Italians to acquire property in Turkey, and the conduct of the coasting trade. Upon the answer of the PORTE, the semi-official agency declares, will depend the future attitude of the Italian Government and the action of the squadron.

The Italians, it seems, are not the only nation who have controversies to settle with the PORTE just now. The French, it appears, have been asking to have certain claims in respect to the company which owns the Heraclea coal mines promptly satisfied, and it is said that they propose to exact an indemnity of £500 a day in the event of delay. The SULTAN has had a considerable experience in the past of what happens when he resists the serious demands of a Great Power which has a strong navy at its disposal. He had to yield, as our Paris Correspondent observes, not only to France in 1901, when ADMIRAL CAILLARD seized the Custom-houses at Mytilene, but to Austria-Hungary in 1897, when full reparation was made for the injuries done to the agent of the Austrian-Lloyd at Mersina. We have not yet heard the Turkish side of the case, it is true, but, if it be the fact, as the Tribuna states, that all the other Powers have expressed their approval of the course which Italy has taken, except Austria-Hungary, whose adhesion to it is expected as a matter of course, the presumption must be that Turkey has no valid defence of her conduct to offer. She certainly has not any availal means for resisting the operations of a powerful fleet, if they be carried out with reasonable skill and caution. She will have to make terms with Italy, and it would seem to be her clear interest to make them with all possible promptitude and good faith. She has hitherto been on an excellent footing with that Power in Constantinople, and she may still find it to her advantage to have Italy for a friend. Surrender may be unpleasant to the SULTAN, but he can derive at least one consolation from the circumstances in which he has to contemplate it in the present instance. The Powers which are seeking to vindicate their several rights and the claims of their subjects under concessions at Constantinople are not likely to have much energy to spare for the vigorous prosecution of a reform policy in Macedonia. That is a compensation which ABDUL HAMID, we may feel confident, will understand and appreciate at its proper worth.

THE SOCIAL DEMOCRATIC CONFERENCE.

ALLIANCE WITH THE LABOUR PARTY REJECTED.

By decisive majorities the Social Democratic party on Saturday rejected two resolutions, one proposing specifically affiliation with the Labour party, the other recommending affiliation "provided Social Democratic party candidates shall run as Socialists."

The relationship of the two parties was the principal subject of debate at the second day's session of the 28th annual conference of the Social Democratic party, and some 150 delegates crowded the Coal Exchange-hall, Manchester. Mr. Jack Moore, of Rochdale, chairman of the conference, presided, and the gathering included the principal leaders of the organization. Four resolutions stood on the agenda in regard to the subject. That advanced by the Willesden branch, which declared directly for affiliation, was accepted as the resolution. The resolution emanating from the Burnley branch was selected as an amendment. It was in the following terms:—"That in view of the resolution passed by the Hull Conference of the Labour party declaring the ultimate object of the party to be the realization of Socialism, the Social Democratic party reconsider its attitude towards the Labour party with a view to reaffiliation thereto, provided it is made clear that all Social Democratic party candidates shall run as Socialists." A Rochdale resolution suggesting that negotiations should be entered upon, and a Battersea motion that the Social Democratic party should not affiliate until the Labour party became an avowed Socialist party, were consequently dropped. The debate, which lasted two and a half hours, was at times heated and stormy. The executive council themselves were divided on the subject, and the minority in the meeting made a great fight for their position.

Mr. FRED KNEE (London) opened the discussion by moving the adoption of the Willesden resolution. Whatever might have been their reasons for secession from the Labour party, he said, the possibility of reunion had never been absent from the minds of many of them. His view was that the psychological moment for which they had waited had now arrived. What was it they did not like about the Labour party? It was the Liberal social reform movement. But that was doomed. It must inevitably be thrust out by the rising consciousness and tendency towards revolution in the working class movement itself, and he urged them, with flags flying and drums beating, to march on and capture the Labour party.

Mr. LUKE RIPPON (Burnley) formally moved the Burnley resolution.

Mr. W. C. LOSE (East Islington) declared that it was not a question of brains, it was a question of counting noses, and with the Labour party they would be numerically swamped though oratorically powerful.

Mr. CARMICHAEL (Battersea) said that a Labour party which declined to have anything to do with Socialism was no good to the Social Democratic party. Instead of progressing, the Independent Labour party had gone back. They had changed Hardie, a Socialist, for Henderson, an anti-Socialist. ("He is not," and "He is.") Yes, he was; recently at a chapel meeting he had attacked Socialism because it was godless. Macdonald was anti-Social-Democratic party (hear, hear), and Macdonald dominated the Labour party more than ever.

Mr. PEARSON (London) said they might as well join the New Theologists, because the latter were tending towards Socialism, as join the Labour party, which was without programme, ideal, or goal. (Cheers.)

Mr. H. M. HYNDMAN explained his reason for supporting a proposal which formerly he had opposed. The Hull resolution had in a positive form committed the Labour party to Socialism, and he urged them to throw the onus of refusing approaches on to the Labour party. That it was possible to force the position of the Labour party they had proof to-day, for Grayson was making his influence felt. There were in Manchester at the present time 20 Socialist orators and leaders of initiative, determination, and vigour, the like of which, with the exception of Grayson, were not to be found in the whole Labour party. (Cheers.) Inside of 12 months, if they could only get at the Labour party, they would transform it into a militant Socialist party. (Cheers.)

Mr. J. GRIMBLE, prospective Socialist candidate for North Hants, warmly approved the proposal in favour of affiliation. If they were going to take part in politics, they must play the political game, even if it was a dirty game. ("No, no.") Their position must be put from the door of the House of Commons, which was the best platform in the country. They could not return a candidate in any constituency in the country with Social Democratic votes alone. They must get the votes of those who sympathized with Socialism and of that fluctuating electoral element whose votes decided to which side the pendulum would swing.

Mr. HARRY QUELCH, whose remarks evoked frequent cheers, said they must not deceive themselves. Any change which had taken place in the attitude of the Labour party towards the Social Democratic party had been one of antagonism. To approach the Labour party was to confess that they had been wrong for seven years. Were they now to pull down the red flag, he asked. ("No, no.") Well, that was what the proposal meant. (Loud cheers.) It was not the Labour leaders they wished to convert, but the constituents of the Labour leaders.

Mr. JACK JONES (West Ham) made a vigorous speech in support of independence. Alliance, he said, might secure them the return of a few members to Parliament, but he considered the price of that luxury would be too great. There were men in the Labour party to-day who were the greatest enemies of Socialism, antagonistic to their ideals, who would do their utmost to misrepresent the Socialist aim. The Social Democratic party's strongest card was the incapacity and the want of pluck of the members of the Labour party. Some of the very leaders of the Independent Labour party were unable to advance their principles because in doing so they would have to attack their trade union allies. Alliance meant the acceptance by the Social Democratic party of agreements entered into by the Labour party, and they would be unable to attack men like John Havelock Wilson and Fred Maddison, though, with regard to Maddison, it did not matter much, because political obscurity would eventually envelope him. (Laughter.) Recently they had Tory organs in London attacking Socialism with the view, presumably, of improving their circulations. The result was that men like Shackleton at once took alarm and said to their party, "You must not accept Socialist resolutions." The Labour party stood for everything advanced between the position of Charles Bradlaugh and that of R. J. Campbell. (Laughter.) Instead of having no programme they had 32. The only thing they were agreed upon was playing down to the canting hypocrisy of the Nonconformist conscience. (Cheers.) Thorne and Grayson were the only consistent and faithful members of the group, and they had been rewarded with repudiation by those who professed to hold their principles.

Mr. F. H. EDWARDS (Birkenhead) felt that a decision on this subject would be better deferred till after the Independent Labour party conference at Huddersfield, for there were rumours of a split in the Independent Labour party, and a large section might be glad to come over to them. (Hear, hear.)

RESULT OF THE VOTING.

For the Burnley amendment there were 31 votes against it, 103. The declaration of the figures from the platform was received with a great outburst of cheers and counter-cheers, during which a Burnley representative sprang up and declared excitedly, "I say we have been engineered out of this by the chairman." An effort was made to howl him down, but he persisted in protesting. Ultimately order was restored, and another vote was taken on the Willesden resolution. Against it there were 130 votes, and in favour of it 30 votes. The feelings of the majority again found vent in a noisy demonstration. The audience joined in, enthusiastically singing the "Red Flag." Three cheers were proposed for freedom and lustily given. Disorder again broke out, some of the delegates claiming that the remaining resolutions ought also to be put, but one after another the protesters against the chairman's ruling were shouted down.

ELECTION OF THE EXECUTIVE.

The ballot for the election of the executive resulted as follows:—London section—H. M. Hyndman, Dora B. Montefiore, F. V. Fisher, F. Knee, J. F. Green, and F. Davey; provincial section—Dan Irving (Burnley), B. R. Hartley (Bradford), Kennedy (Aberdeen), W. Gee (Northampton), H. Watson (Manchester), and J. G. Webster (Tunbridge Wells).

Mr. QUELCH moved a resolution, which met with unanimous approval, reaffirming the position of the party with regard to religion. It was in the following terms:—"That, in view of the efforts of the enemies of Socialism to create division and prejudice in the ranks of the workers by raising sectarian disputes, this conference definitely reaffirms the position always maintained by international social democracy that the Socialist movement is concerned solely with secular affairs and regards religion as a private matter."

SUNDAY'S MEETING.

The Social Democratic party conference was brought to a close yesterday. The final session was held in private, most of the business relating to matters of internal organization. A committee was appointed to suggest a scheme of decentralization, a resolution having been carried the previous evening in favour of organization by district areas instead of ... national lines as at present. Licensing, education, and unemployment were briefly discussed. The conference condemned the Licensing Bill now before Parliament in that it did not embrace the principle of national ownership. For the educational problem the meeting favoured a secular solution of the religious difficulty, and it condemned the I.L.P. Unemployed Bill which was described as being miserably inadequate. Nationalization of all work was considered the only satisfactory solution of the unemployed problem.

Mr. DAN IRVING, who had a most enthusiastic reception, said that the meeting, originally called for...

AMBASSADE D'ITALIE

Le marquis Imperiali, ex représentant de S. M. le roi Victor-Emmanuel III près la Sublime-Porte, quitte aujourd'hui définitivement notre ville. Il a été reçu hier en audience privée pour la remise de ses lettres de rappel à S. M. I. le Sultan.

Le marquis Imperiali était accompagné de M. Cangià, premier drogman, qui fut également admis en présence du souverain. Sa Majesté s'est montrée d'une amabilité particulièrement flatteuse envers l'ex-ambassadeur italien et s'est plu à reconnaître les efforts déployés par ce brillant diplomate pour raffermir les liens d'amitié existant entre la Turquie et l'Italie. Le souverain a fait don au marquis Imperiali de son portrait avec autographe.

L'ex-ambassadeur se rendit ensuite à la Sublime Porte pour prendre congé du grand-vézir et du ministre des affaires étrangères, mais en l'absence de ces personnages, il déposa sa carte.

 Le baron Mayor des Planches, qui succède au marquis Imperiali, est arrivé hier par l'Orient Express avec la baronne Mayor des Planches.

Il est âgé de 59 ans, étant né le 27 juillet 1851 ; il a été successivement ministre d'Italie en Suisse, en Serbie et aux Etats Unis Divers journaux de notre ville ont surtout fait ressortir sa participation ardente à la politique gallophobe de Crispi.

Dans son numéro du 16 janvier dernier, le Lloyd Ottoman écrivait : « M. Mayor des Planches a toujours été un favori du prince de Bismarck. Il avait accompagné Crispi à Berlin et à Friedrichsruhe. Il avait tellement captivé le grand chancelier que Bismarck avait voulu que les négociations entre l'allemagne et l'Italie fussent toujours faites par lui. Une fois que Bismarck avait lu une brochure de M. Mayor des Planches sur certaines négociations italo-allemandes, il s'écria : On voit bien que c'est écrit par Mayor des Planches. »

Ce matin, un autre confrère évoque également ce passé du nouvel ambassadeur et rappelle qu'il a reçu la plume de Bismarck, en récompense d'un bon mot

« Le baron, dit-il, grand admirateur du chancelier de fer, déclara un jour que ce dernier ne pouvait écrire qu'avec une plume d'aigle, alors que le prince Herbert de Bismarck constatait que son père ne se servait que d'une plume d'oie.

« Le baron Edmond Mayor des Planches ajoute notre excellent confrère, servit de trait d'union entre les deux hommes d'Etat, en plusieurs occasions, même après la chute du grand chancelier.

Il subit, aussi bien en Italie qu'ailleurs, les conséquences de leur intimité et de leur défaveur ».

Ces anciennes tendances politiques du baron Mayor des Planches ont certainement leur valeur documentaire. Mais depuis les temps auxquels on fait allusion, l'orientation de la politique italienne s'est modifiée sensiblement. Et l'on se demande jusqu'à quel point ces souvenirs peuvent servir le nouvel ambassadeur qui recevra peut-être demain les instructions de l'ambassadeur à Paris devenu ministre des affaires étrangères, du nouveau cabinet en formation.

L'ambassadeur très distingué et très clairvoyant qui vient représenter l'Italie en Orient est le premier à comprendre qu'il y a des choses changées dans le monde, depuis qu'il faillit venir ici pour remplacer M. le chevalier Pansa.

 Le nouvel ambassadeur d'Italie a été salué à la gare par le personnel de l'ambassade. Le baron et la baronne Mayor des Planches se sont directement rendus au Péra-Palace, où ils doivent séjourner pendant quelques jours jusqu'à la mise en état de leurs appartements à l'hôtel de l'ambassade.

Aujourd'hui, le nouvel ambassadeur, accompagné du 1er drogman, remettra au ministre des affaires étrangères, en sa résidence à Ayaz-Pacha, copie de ses lettres de créances.

Ce matin, à 10 h. 1/2, avant de partir, le marquis Imperiali a présenté à son successeur le personnel de l'ambassade et du consulat général, ainsi que les présidents des Sociétés italiennes, les professeurs des écoles, etc.

Le marquis Imperiali trouve dans les témoignages reçus à l'occasion de son départ une récompense de ses efforts. Le nouveau représentant de l'Italie ne voit venir à lui que des visages souriants et des concours qui s'offrent.

La partenza dell'Ambasciatore d'Italia.

Il Marchese Imperiali, ex Ambasciatore d'Italia, è partito ieri da Costantinopoli. Si erano recati alla stazione per salutare S.E. i Ministri dell'Interno, degli Esteri, delle Finanze, dei Lavori Pubblici e dell'Istruzione Pubblica. Il Gran Vizir essendo impedito dai lavori parlamentari, si fece sostituire da Djevid bey.

Il Marchese Imperiali ha saputo durante il suo soggiorno che fece nella nostra capitale, coll'inverni, per la sua cortesia e per i suoi modi distinti, il cuore delle persone che l'hanno conosciuto. La sua partenza è causa di generale rammarico.

Ciò spiega il gran numero di lle persone recatesi alla stazione per ossequiarlo.

S.E. ha contribuito a consolidare le buone relazioni esistenti fra l'Italia e la Turchia ed ha sempre dimostrato verso il Governo Ottomano e specialmente verso la giovane Turchia sentimenti di cordiale sincerità.

DIPLOMAT PROMOTED.

The New Italian Ambassador to Great Britain.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 7.

The Marquis Imperiali di Francavilla, the new Italian Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, is leaving towards the end of the present month to take up his post in London.

His Excellency has spent six years in Constantinople, during which he has taken an active part in the various diplomatic affairs of the country, notably in the prolonged negotiations in connection with the reforms for Macedonia. The marquis has had numerous and at times complicated matters to negotiate with the Sublime Porte which he succeeded in bringing to a satisfactory conclusion. The re-establishment of Italian post offices in Turkey and the support given to Italian educational establishments in the Levant are some of the chief results of his Embassy.

Socially, the Marquis and the Marquise Imperiali, née Princess Colonna, were most popular figures; they were to be seen everywhere, and their presence was ever welcome. Their departure is much regretted in all circles, but it is felt that the Marquis Imperiali has been honoured with a well-deserved promotion. Both the marquis and the marquise speak English fluently.—Reuter.

S. E. le marquis G. Imperiali di Francavilla, ambassadeur extraordinaire d'Italie à Londres, a quitté, hier définitivement notre ville, par l'Orient-Express.

Bien avant l'heure du départ du train la gare était envahie par un monde des plus choisis qui avait tenu à saluer le départ du marquis qui a su se créer tant de sympathies dans la haute société constantinopolitaine durant le long séjour dans la capitale ottomane.

S. M. I. le Sultan avait délégué Ghalib pacha, grand-maître des cérémonies, pour saluer le marquis Imperiali, Saadeddine bey, maître des cérémonies représentait le grand-vézir, retenu à la Chambre des députés.

Etaient également présents à la gare le général Mahmoud Chevket pacha, ministre de la guerre ; Rifaat pacha, ministre des affaires étrangères ; Talaat bey, ministre de l'intérieur ; Djavid bey, ministre des finances ; Haladjian effendi, ministre des travaux publics ; Emroullah effendi, ministre de l'instruction publique; Ohannès bey Couyoumdjian, mustéchar du ministère des affaires étrangères ; le comte et la comtesse de Robilant pacha, Gabriel effendi Noradounghian, sénateur ; Davoud effendi, sénateur. Tous les ambassadeurs et les ministres au complet, les chefs des institutions financières de la capitale et les notables de la colonie italienne.

Rarement départ d'ambassadeur a donné lieu à une pareille démonstration de sympathie sincère et spontanée. Elle était justifiée, car S. E. le marquis et la marquise Imperiali di Francavilla ne comptaient que des amis dans notre ville.

La présence de tous les membres du cabinet, S. E. Mahmoud Chewket pacha en tête, était une preuve du regret que cause le départ du représentant du roi Victor-Emmanuel III et de l'estime dont il jouissait dans tous les cercles de notre ville.

The Patriarchal Crisis

The members of the Holy Synod held a meeting yesterday and discussed the Patriarch's proposal for the appointment of a mixed commission composed of ecclesiastics and laymen to decide as to whether his Holiness had acted illegally. The Patriarch's proposal was not favourably received by the majority of the members of the Synod.

It is reported that several Metropolitans have met at Monastir to discuss the situation at the Greek Patriarchate and that they will communicate the result of their deliberations to the Patriarch and the Synod.

Schmidt is a unique in the history of any great department of State (says a writer in the Jewish Chronicle) that Jews should at the same time be the permanent and the Parliamentary heads! Yet it is only a few weeks ago since Sir Matthew Nathan took up the position of Secretary of the Post Office, of which Mr. Samuel has now become Chief. This means that practically the whole administration of the vast organization which centres at St. Martin's-le-Grand is being conducted by members of our community. To any who thinks a moment and tries to realise the immense ramifications of the Post Office and its huge business, the fact that it has been virtually entrusted to two Jews is an added proof of the stupidity of the oft-repeated gibe about Jews having monopolie of governing.

It is reported that M. Paraf, the chemist, who as already reported was arrested for the importation of his wife, is convicted that his arrest was brought about by his wife, but never to think that the method he employed to secure the fidelity of his wife is a normal one, to be employed by any husband who may entertain doubts on that score.

When Mme Paraf was liberated by M. Hamard she could scarcely support the light. The attention of the police was directed to her by one of her sisters and some neighbours, who had not perceived her for a long time. She is now divorcing the chemist's shop and is distressed at what has happened.

The Petit Journal learns from a police official that Mme Paraf would perhaps have preferred to continue her extraordinary life rather than see her husband in his present shrait. She pities him, is incensed at the publicity given to the affair and would like him to return. The official's opinion was that the chemist will be condemned and when liberated may rejoin his wife, who will welcome him and perhaps his chicks at the same time.

PARTIE FRANCAISE

La paix des frontières

Les incidents de frontière se multiplient à tel point qu'ils finissent par importuner. Il ne saurait résulter rien de grave dans les relations extérieures à cause de tels conflits ; mais il ne peut davantage en résulter rien de bon. Et l'on devrait s'efforcer de les faire cesser. Depuis deux mois il s'en est produit dans toutes les directions : au nord, au sud, à l'est et à l'ouest. Nous en avons eu avec la Perse, avec la France, avec le Monténégro, avec la Bulgarie ; bref avec tous nos voisins.

Le gouvernement ottoman doit se être encore plus contrariqué que les Etats limitrophes, car cela fait au pays une renommée de turbulence qu'il ne mérite point. On pourrait croire que ces incidents sont voulus et certainement ils ne le sont pas. Le procédé, s'il était systématiquement pratiqué, serait très-blâmable, et il pourrait finir par devenir dangereux. Le gouvernement le sait. Aussi peut-on affirmer qu'il ne néglige rien pour assurer le calme à la frontière, à toutes les frontières ; que les instructions qu'il donne à cet égard sont formelles et précises ; et si elles ne sont pas observées, on peut être assuré qu'il est le premier à le déplorer.

Mais est-il d'ailleurs certain que ces incidents soient toujours provoqués par les postes turcs ? Presque toujours on le prétend; encore faudrait-il le prouver.

La Bulgarie, par exemple, entend faire cette preuve d'une curieuse façon. Elle dit :

« Voyez : nous n'avons jamais de conflit de frontière avec nos autres voisins : les Roumains et les Serbes. La frontière bulgaro-roumaine, en Dobroudja, est assez mal définie, se déroulant à travers la plaine dans presque toute son étendue ; et cependant on n'entend jamais parler de conflit. C'est que les deux pays ont le respect réciproque de leurs droits. A la frontière serbe de même. Les relations bulgaro-serbes ont été assez tendues ces dernières années, l'opinion, dans les deux pays, était plus ou moins excitée, et cette excitation aurait pu se traduire par des vexations réciproques à la frontière. On n'en a en constater aucune. Cela prouve que ni Serbes, ni Bulgares ne songèrent à se faire la guerre à coups d'épingle. Cette profonde tranquillité constatée à la frontière bulgaro-roumaine comme à celle serbo-bulgare démontre péremptoirement le dédain des Bulgares pour de tels moyens, pour de telles mesquineries, et prouve, aux yeux de tout homme impartial, que si la frontière bulgaro-turque est trop souvent le théâtre d'actes d'hostilité, la responsabilité n'en saurait être imputée [à la Bulgarie ».

Cette manière de raisonner peut séduire de prime abord ; mais elle s'écroule à la réflexion. Les généralités ne sauraient être probantes dans tous les cas. Chacun de ces cas doit être spécialement examiné et enquêté. C'est là un point indiscutable. Par exemple, qui est responsable du dernier conflit, celui de Tomrach ? Les Bulgares répondent sans sourciller que ce sont les Turcs ; mais ceux-ci affirment non moins nettement que ce sont les Bulgares. Tomrach se trouve à l'extrémité d'une langue de terre qui s'enfonce comme un clou dans le territoire bulgare. C'est situé dans le Rhodope. Et de cette extrémité, placée sur le point culminant de la montagne, on a une vue superbe sur la Bulgarie, s'étendant jusqu'à Philippopoli. C'est un observatoire naturel dont les Bulgares sont très contrariés ; d'autant plus qu'en ce moment ils exécutent non loin de là des travaux de fortification, dont le poste turc suit et note tranquillement les progrès à la grande irritation du génie bulgare.

N'est-il pas permis de voir là la cause du conflit qui a éclaté sur ce point ?

Une enquête impartiale pourrait seule faire la lumière ; mais il doit être bien difficile de se livrer à des enquêtes impartiales sur le Rhodope, et il est probable que les choses resteront en l'état, les Bulgares continuant à mettre le conflit à la charge des Turcs, et les Turcs persistant à l'attribuer aux Bulgares.

Quoi qu'il en soit, ces incidents importunent l'opinion, ainsi que nous venons de le dire, et il y a intérêt pour tous d'y mettre un terme. La guerre ne sortira certainement pas d'un combat de frontière ; mais cela agite les esprits et donne un sentiment d'insécurité préjudiciable au travail régulier de l'agriculture dans les deux pays, aux transactions industrielles et commerciales. Il est donc de l'intérêt de tous d'en empêcher le retour.

Le gouvernement ottoman ne manquera pas de renouveler ses instructions dans ce sens, de les préciser, d'en prescrire la rigoureuse observation. Si la Bulgarie en fait autant, si elle ordonne à ses postes de surveillance de respecter le territoire ottoman comme les postes turcs respecteront le territoire bulgare, la paix des frontières sera enfin assurée.

La crise patriarcale

Les membres du St-Synode se sont réunis hier en séance au patriarcat, à huis-clos.

On y a discuté une proposition du patriarche, demandant qu'une commission mixte, composée de religieux et de laïques soit instituée à l'effet de statuer sur le point de savoir si Sa Sainteté a contrevenu à la loi.

La dite proposition n'a pas reçu un accueil favorable et, partant, aucune réponse n'a été donnée au patriarche.

Vers la fin de la séance se présenta, par devant les membres du St-Synode, Mgr Cyrille, ex-métropolitain d'Andrinople, qui déclara approuver l'attitude du St-Synode.

Un télégramme parvenu hier soir de Monastir, et portant la signature des métropolitains de Pélagonie, Castoria, Goritza, Moglena, Prespon et Grevena adressé au patriarche et au métropolitain de Nicomédie, recommande de mettre fin à la situation impréoise actuelle par l'exécution immédiate des décisions légales du Saint-Synode, maintenant ainsi intact, le statu quo ecclésiastique.

LE DÉPART DE L'AMBASSADEUR D'ITALIE

Hier soir, au Cercle d'Orient, les notables de la colonie italienne ont donné un dîner d'adieu à S. E. le marquis Imperiali, ambassadeur d'Italie, qui, au commencement du mois de mars, quittera Constantinople pour aller remplir un nouveau poste à Londres.

Il y avait presque quatre-vingts convives, tous comptant les fonctionnaires de l'ambassade et du consulat qui n'ont pas assisté au dîner, pour laisser à cette démonstration un caractère de plus grande spontanéité de la part de toute la colonie italienne envers son chef.

Le dîner a été empreint de la plus grande cordialité.

M. L. Fernandez, président de la Chambre de commerce, organisateur de la fête, a pris la parole au dessert pour remercier S. E. l'ambassadeur de tout ce qu'il a fait pour la colonie pendant les six années de son séjour à Constantinople, dans toutes les occasions, et surtout d'avoir consacré et sanctionné les relations de la patrie avec la Turquie. Il a enfin rappelé comment le marquis Imperiali a su aussi se faire aimer de tous et principalement des pauvres dont elle s'était faite la providence et qui regretteront son départ.

S. E. l'ambassadeur, très ému, a remercié l'assistance de la touchante démonstration dont il est l'objet, ajoutant que puisque la commission Fernandez a voulu parler de son œuvre à Constantinople, il est bien heureux de déclarer qu'il a toujours fait tout ce qui était en son pouvoir, envers tous, même quand il n'a pas réussi par suite de circonstances indépendantes de sa volonté et qu'il est pleinement satisfait de pouvoir constater, en quittant Constantinople, que les relations de l'Italie avec la Turquie ne pourraient être meilleures. Il a enfin levé son verre à la santé de S. M. I. le Sultan, de S. M. le roi d'Italie, à la prospérité des deux pays et de la colonie italienne, dont, a-t-il dit, il conservera précieusement le souvenir.

La Question Arménienne

Dans deux articles de fond, le Matchouk, reconnaît sur sa thèse de parler devant la Chambre des députés la question d'Adana, avait représenté aux régulières de l'assemblée nationale arménienne, qui sont des adhérents aux deux principaux comités arméniens, et en particulier à Monsieur effendi Tchéraz(*) d'être incompétents avec eux-mêmes, parce qu'ils avaient voté pour la motion du conseil municipal tendant à inviter le patriarche à retirer sa démission. Un rédacteur du Jeune est allé recueillir l'opinion de Tchéraz effendi, qui a fait les déclarations suivantes :

— Le Matchouk dit que, par conjecturier ... le journal L'Arménie, vous avez excité la ... Hamid autant que les dynamiteurs arméniens ... que par conséquent vous êtes également ... cable des massacres.

— Le sultan Hamid, a répondu Tchéraz effendi, n'a jamais donné d'ordre de massacrer ... consignataires d'un homme qui écrivait ... articles contre lui. Pourquoi n'a-t-il pas donné ... l'ordre de massacrer les Bulgares, les Grecs, les Albanais, les Arabes, les Kurdes, les Juifs ... même les Turcs, puisque Rudolf et d'autres ... garus, Admirables et d'autres Grecs, Dar... Hima et d'autres Albanais, Nedjib Acou d'autres Arabes, Baderkhan et d'autres Kurdes, Fina et d'autres Juifs, Ahmed Riza et d'autres Turcs ont écrit contre le sultan déchu des ... des plus violents encore ? La question a ... mence naquit en 1870, quand le patriarche Nersès Varjabédian fit publier à Londres un ... port circonstancié, en français et en anglais, ... oppressions des Kurdes contre les Arméniens. ... A partir de cette date jusqu'en 1894, ... dix pendant 18 ans, il n'y eut pas de ... cris Pourquoi ? Parce que Mgr Nersès et le ... tre patriarche arménien défendirent la ... nationale arménienne seulement par la ... et par la parole. Le premier massacre eut lieu ... Sassoun où des révolutionnaires s'étaient ... dits pour provoquer un soulèvement ... gouvernement turc. Il faut savoir faire la ... tinction entre l'activité diplomatique et l'... révolutionnaire dans la question arménienne.

— Le Matchouk dit aussi que les récents ... anires et agents politiques arméniens, ... rentrés en Turquie ne se soutient pas être ... fidèles à leur passé.

— S'ils sont rentrés en Turquie, c'est qu'ils ... est produit un grand événement d'ordre ... rieur qui a changé totalement la situation ... tique dans ce pays. Ils ont dû modifier ... réglement leur ligne de conduite. Je crois ... me part ou opportunité de l'école de Gand. ... A mon sentiment, c'est faire preuve de sagesse ... de changer de moyens suivant les circonstances, tout en ne perdant pas de vue l'objectif principal. Français et Russes s'entretuèrent bien ... la guerre de Crimée ; ils sont aujourd'hui ... amis et alliés, comme le commandant leurs intérêts communs. En ce qui nous concerne, nous avions hier un député nouveau et une administration arbitraire ; nous les avons combattus. Nous avons aujourd'hui un nouveau droit ... nous un agnau et une administration constitutionnelle ; nous les secondons. Où est donc la contradiction de notre conduite, comme le Matchouk nous le reproche ? Notre passé, fait de lutte contre les maux de l'ancien régime qui a pesé d'une façon spéciale sur les Arméniens, ne nous empêche nullement le devoir de ne nous élever contre l'ordre des choses actuel. »

Quand à la question d'Adana, l'honorable député de l'assemblée nationale arménienne a émis les considérations suivantes :

— Vous me dites que le crieur journal nous en veut d'avoir fait naître d'une réorganisation servile, au plein séance de notre assemblée nationale arménienne, à propos de la question d'Adana, comme n'ayant pas mérité à l'idée de saisir la Chambre des députés ottomans d'un mémoire, et d'avoir voté pour le retrait de la démission du patriarche. Permettez-moi de relever qu'il ne m'appartient encore sur la manière dont la nation attitude dans cette question épineuse. Une cinquantaine de lecteurs de troubles ont été condamnés à mort et exécutés et des centaines d'autres à la déportation. Nous pouvions considérer tout cela comme une satisfaction. Sous l'ancien régime, nous n'aurions pas même pu obtenir cela ; les auteurs de massacres et de pillages restaient impunis. Nous avons dû pour le retour du patriarche au patriarcat, parce que nous avions constaté qu'il nous avait mieux en état de défendre avec plus d'autorité les intérêts nationaux, c'est ce qu'il fait ; avons-nous donc mal agi ? Quant au mémoire à présenter à la Chambre des députés ottomans, un membre l'a proposé, mais personne ne l'appuya, dans la pensée que la Chambre est entièrement bien disposée en faveur des victimes d'Adana, tandis que la Chambre des députés ne mettrait absolument pas en mouvoir avec tous ses éléments aussi hétérogènes.

(*) Patriote arménien. Il fit partie, en qualité de secrétaire privé de feu Mgr Khorénien, de la mission arménienne qui se rendit au Congrès de Berlin pour soutenir la cause arménienne.

La commission des requêtes. — Les crédits pour la flotte. — La loi sur la propriété littéraire.

Le Sénat a eu, hier, une séance qui n'a pas manqué de présenter de l'animation à certains moments.

On a commencé par discuter au sujet de deux tableaux soumis par la commission des requêtes et indiquant la suite donnée aux demandes présentées au Sénat.

Ekren bey a trouvé que ces tableaux ne contenaient pas des indications suffisantes quant au résultat de l'action du Sénat. Notre commissaire, dit Ekren bey, ne fait que transmettre aux pétitionnaires ce qu'il a reçu du conseil des ministres, et n'avise point pour le renvoi à la commission des requêtes ou à celle des finances, ou à celle de l'instruction publique, ou à celle des travaux publics, ou à celle de la guerre, ou à celle de la marine, ou à celle de l'intérieur, ou à celle des affaires étrangères, ou à celle de la justice, ou à celle des affaires religieuses, ou à celle des postes et télégraphes, ou à celle des forêts, ou à celle des mines, ou à celle des douanes

Le départ de l'ambassadeur d'Italie

Le marquis Imperiali di Francaville est parti hier. Le marquis était accompagné à la gare du baron Mayor des Planches, le nouvel ambassadeur d'Italie.

Lorsque le marquis Imperiali arriva à la gare, un nombre considérable de personnes l'y attendait, et nous pourrions dire que la colonie italienne se trouvait là présente, au complet. De même on remarquait le corps diplomatique, les ministres ottomans et les chefs des différentes communautés religieuses. Le marquis Imperiali saluait tout le monde, donnant de chaleureuses poignées de mains à toutes les personnes qui l'approchaient. Il était visiblement ému des marques de sympathie.

Lorsque le dernier signal du départ fut donné, le marquis Imperiali monta sur la plateforme, et le train s'étant mis en marche, salua encore ceux dont les regards le suivaient.

Le marquis Imperiali va directement à Vienne. De là, il se rendra à Rome, d'où il ira à Naples, à la rencontre de la marquise, avec laquelle il se dirigera vers Londres, où il prendra possession de son nouveau poste.
