PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 88th CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

Vol. 109

WASHINGTON, TUESDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1963

No. 169

House of Representatives

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D.D., offered the following prayer:

I Corinthians 10: 12. Wherefore let him, who thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall.

O Thou God of might and of mercy, may we daily take heed unto ourselves and be more fully aware that our individual and national life has a vulnerable side and that we cannot breast the storms and headwinds of subtle temptations and meet and master them with our own puny strength.

We penitently confess that irreligion and indifference to the spiritual ideals seem to have become the habit of life for many. Grant that our own loyalty and devotion to fundamental religious principles may never be weakened and dissipated by feelings of complacency.

Help us to see clearly that our faith must always be kept vivid and vital for experience teaches us that eternal vigilance is the price of a faith that is strong and steadfast as truly as it is the price of a freedom that is coordinated with rigid discipline.

Hear us in the name of the Author of our faith and the Captain of our salvation. Amen.

AN ACT TO ESTABLISH A REVOLVING FUND FROM WHICH THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR MAY MAKE LOANS TO FINANCE THE PROCUREMENT OF EXPERT ASSISTANCE BY INDIAN TRIBES IN CASES BEFORE THE INDIAN CLAIMS COMMISSION

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H.R. 3306) to establish a revolving fund from which the Secretary of the Interior may make loans to finance the procurement of expert assistance by Indian tribes in cases before the Indian Claims Commission, with Senate amendments thereto, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Page 2, strike out lines 1 to 6, inclusive and insert:

"Sec. 2. No loan shall be made under this Act to a tribe, band, or group if it has funds available on deposit in the Federal Treasury or elsewhere in an amount adequate to obtain the expert assistance it needs or if, in the opinion of the Secretary, the fees to be paid the experts are unreasonable in light of the services to be performed by them."

Page 3, after line 2, insert:

"Sec. 7. After the date of the approval of this Act, the Secretary of the Interior shall approve no contract which makes the compensation payable to a witness before the Indian Claims Commission contingent upon the recovery of a judgment against the United States."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. ASPINALL)?

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I see no one on the minority side on the floor in connection with this bill. I assume that calling this up has the approval of the minority?

Mr. LAUSCHE. So the band begins to play, the hurdy-gurdy moves on, and the Congress contemplates making things worse than they are. The bill of which I speak ought not to be passed. If it is passed, it will rise to plague every Member of Congress. It will rise to plague us because we shall be rendered defenseless in saying to pressure groups, "I cannot give you what you ask. You are not entitled to it." The pressure groups will answer, "You gave yourself a pay raise of $12,500. You gave the Supreme Court judges a pay raise of $25,000, and a 50-percent raise in pay to district judges."

My inquiry is, How will we answer those statements? We shall not be able to do so.

Mr. President, I believe the Senator from California (Mr. KUCHEL) wanted to ask me a question.

Mr. KUCHEL. I noticed in the press the other day that a comparison was made between the Secretary of Defense, Mr. Robert McNamara, who receives $25,000 a year for administering a $50,000 million a year defense budget, vis-a-vis the police chief of Chicago, as I recall, who receives, I believe, $30,000 a year.

Mr. LAUSCHE. What is it the Senator wishes to ask me?

Mr. KUCHEL. I must say I believe that is not defensible.

Mr. LAUSCHE. If we are going to fix salaries on the basis of the magnitude of the money expended, we shall be in an indefensible and absurd position. If I were to tell the people of the State of Ohio that I want to be in the Senate merely because of the $35,000, they would have a right to tell me to get out.

Mr. KUCHEL. The Senator from Ohio, I believe, is correct, but if he will let me comment further—

Mr. LAUSCHE. I will allow the Senator to ask his question.

Mr. KUCHEL. I believe that the people of the United States need to attach to a position such as that of Secretary of Defense the finest, the most able, the most competent person that we can find for that very important job. The comparison I have just made demonstrates that, although the skills which are required by a law enforcement officer in an American city are not to be underestimated, they are hardly to be compared with the skills and techniques required by the Office of the Secretary of Defense.

It occurs to me that this indicates there is something wrong with laws which downgrade, in my judgment—and I am not going to make a long speech on this subject—the qualifications for and the salary of one of the most important positions in the Federal Government. That is the only thing that I suggest.

Mr. LAUSCHE. If that were the only basis on which we would pay to attract people to enter Government service, we would be doomed to destruction. If a soldier who is called to duty should demand that he be paid in accordance with the significance of the work that he is doing, there would be no end to the pay.

Mr. President, I repeat that if we are to be able to withstand the inordinate demands, we should make certain that we follow a course of conduct that will place armor upon our bodies to enable us to say "No," rather than to weaken ourselves through the act of granting increased pay, and thus render ourselves incapable of saying "No" when the time comes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Has the Senator from Ohio concluded?

Mr. LAUSCHE. I have concluded, and I thank the Chair for his courtesy to me.

VISIT TO THE SENATE BY GAETANO MARTINO, PRESIDENT OF THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT

Mr. MANSFIELD, Mr. President, Mr. Gaetano Martino, President of the European Parliament, has honored the Senate by visiting us in this Chamber today.

The European Parliament is a 142-member body which is the parliamentary branch of 3 European communities. Its membership includes the leading parliamentarians of the Six—France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, and Switzerland—and it already is the most responsible interparliamentary group in Europe. During the next several years it will almost certainly acquire increased responsibility and, in time, become of greater significance in the affairs of Europe.

As President of the European Parliament and as a well-known statesman in his own right—he is a former NATO "wise man" and Italian Foreign Minister—President Martino is a man of respect and authority among the European parliamentarians.

We are indeed fortunate and honored to have him visit with us today. [Applause, Senators rising.]

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On behalf of the Senate, the Chair extends a cordial welcome to our distinguished guest.

COMPUTATION OF PROPOSED INCOME TAX REDUCTIONS

Mr. SMATHERS. Mr. President, on October 15, 1963, the able and distinguished chairman of the Senate Finance Committee had inserted in the Record a table prepared by the staff of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation indicating the average annual tax reduction per individual income taxpayer under the tax bill, H.R. 8363, as passed by the House of Representatives.

The table was prepared on the assumption that persons filing a joint return should be counted as two taxpayers.

Inasmuch as persons filing a joint return represent one economic unit, I asked the Treasury Department to furnish comparable figures for me to indicate the average annual tax reduction counting joint returns as a single taxpayer, which I believe gives a more realistic picture.

Because of the great interest in this matter, I ask unanimous consent at this time to have the table prepared by the Treasury Department comparing these two methods of computing the tax reduction inserted in the body of the Record.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Estimated average annual tax reduction per taxpayer under H.R. 8363 when fully effective, by adjusted gross income class

Adjusted gross income class	Tax reduction (Joint committee calculation) ¹	Tax reduction ²
to $3,000.....	440	457
$3,000 to $5,000.....	87	100
$5,000 to $10,000.....	90	159
$10,000 to $20,000.....	165	312
$20,000 to $50,000.....	500	1,020
$50,000 and over.....	2,194	2,625
All taxpayers.....	110	174

² Excluding capital gains; joint returns counted as 1 taxpayer.

WISE MEN ARE ABLE TO REVISE THEIR THINKING: EISENHOWER ON POPULATION CONTROL

Mr. GRUENING. Mr. President, when I discussed at some length on October 10 the population problem confronting mankind I pointed to the paradoxical situation which exists when we provide technical and economic assistance to nations, thereby helping developing nations grow more food with which they barely keep alive their burgeoning populations. Such assistance, I repeat, merely helps the world take a step backward.

Therefore, I am pleased today to call to the attention of the Senate nearly similar words written by former President Eisenhower in his article "Let's Be Honest With Ourselves," part 2, appearing in the October 26, 1963, issue of the Saturday Evening Post.

Says President Eisenhower:

The time has come, also, when we must take into account the effect of the population explosion on our mutual-assistance system. * * * Unless we do, it may smother the economic progress of many nations which, with our technical and economic assistance are striving to build a decent standard of living. * * * There is no real progress or security to a nation which, with outside help, raises its productive capacity by 2 percent a year while the population rises 3 percent.

Such thinking is welcomed and realistic and I commend the former President for reversing his earlier thinking, and frankly admitting that he has, as he does in his article when he says:

Population control is a highly sensitive problem, of course. When I was President I opposed the use of Federal funds to provide birth-control information to countries we were aiding because I felt this would violate the deepest religious convictions of large groups of taxpayers. As I now look back, it may be that I was carrying that conviction too far. I still believe that as a national policy we should not make birth-control programs a condition to our foreign aid, but we should tell receiving nations how population growth threatens them and what can be done about it. Also, it seems quite possible that scientific research, if mobilized for the purpose, could develop new biological knowledge

PRESIDENT TO SEE ALLIED LEADERS; ERHARD IS FIRST

November Talks Slated— Kennedy Expects to Meet Home and de Gaulle Later

U.S. TROOPS AN ISSUE

Talks Will Aim at Resolving Rift on Common Market and NATO Problems

By MAX FRANKEL

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22—

President Kennedy will meet here next month with West Germany's new Chancellor, Dr. Ludwig Erhard, at the start of what promises to be a hectic winter season of allied diplomacy.

Before the end of the year, Mr. Kennedy hopes also to meet with the Earl of Home, Britain's new Prime Minister, although nothing definite has been arranged. He plans to meet President de Gaulle of France early in 1964.

At these meetings, the United States will begin new efforts to end the drift of the Atlantic alliance and to cope with the economic and military issues that have become increasingly troublesome. The changes of leadership in Bonn and London are welcomed here, even though changes of national policies are expected to be slow.

Extent of Split Portrayed

The major Western powers have been divided on several issues, including the conduct of East-West negotiations, the organization and tactics of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the disposition and control of nuclear weapons, the degree of European political integration and the nature of trade relations between the Common Market and its non-member allies, including the United States.

The extent of the division in the alliance, and particularly in the European unity movement, was portrayed here today with equal candor by Gaetano Martino, president of the Common Market Parliament.

He saw President Kennedy and later said that "the momentum" for political unity in Europe had been lost, that nationalism was being revived and that the leaders of the unity movement could not see a way out of the impasse.

Describing himself as optimistic for the long run, Mr. Martino said he saw no immediate solution in any current proposals, including the proposal to set up a multinational, nuclear-armed fleet under the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The delicacy of the alliance was demonstrated in another way today as the State Department tried to overcome new fears in Bonn that the United States planned to reduce its military forces in Europe. The impression was spread by the current Big Lift of an armored division to Germany and accompanying reports from the Defense Department that airlifts should make possible

"useful reductions" in heavy overseas military expenditures. For the new German Chancellor, nothing could have posed a more serious political challenge to his strongly pro-American statements of last week. The Defense Department said it was merely reflecting administration thinking and that no cuts were planned. But the State Department was besieged by urgent and angry inquiries from Bonn, which Secretary of State Dean Rusk will have to answer when he visits Germany later this week. President de Gaulle's veto of British membership in the Common Market last January and the reduced tension with the Soviet Union intensified the problems of the Western allies and prevented real agreement on any of them this year.

The problems transcend personalities and political positions, but the waning power of the alliance and has supported further negotiations. He has conceded some improvement in East-West relations and has supported further negotiations. He has conceded some improvement in East-West relations and has supported further negotiations.

contacts with Moscow. He has also stressed the importance of British cooperation with United States plans for an allied nuclear force.

As a political leader, however, his strength and influence must still be tested, and Washington expects him to be embroiled soon in an uphill election campaign against the Labor party.

The indications today were that the British leader has not yet decided when and where he will meet Mr. Kennedy. The visit of President de Gaulle to Washington now seems certain to be in late January or early February. The French leader will be repaying President Kennedy's visit to Paris in better known figure here. He is admired for his independence of view and forceful presentation but to clear away some of the Western interests to Soviet hostility in order to work for the British common interests.

Chancellor Erhard will visit the United States on the way to the United States. Lord Home, the former British Foreign Minister, is an even better known figure here. He is admired for his independence of view and forceful presentation but to clear away some of the Western interests to Soviet hostility in order to work for the British common interests.

European Official Visits Kennedy

Gaetano Martino, president of the European Parliament—composed of representatives of the nations which belong to the Common Market and Euratom—is shown as he visited with President Kennedy at the White House yesterday. After the meeting Martino, who also heads Italy's Liberal Party, said he felt that Mr. Kennedy shared his view that Britain should become a member of the Common Market.

STARRING AT THE ITALIAN Embassy earlier was the President of the European Parliament, Gaetano Martino. He is here with two colleagues on an official visit which includes meetings today with President Kennedy and Vice President Johnson. He was honored by Ambassador and Mrs. Fenoaltea at a reception and will leave tomorrow for New York and Cape Canaveral.

The European Parliament, synonymous with the Common Market in the minds of many Americans, actually is comprised of three communities of the six participating nations, said Secretary General of the parliament, Hans Nord: The original coal and steel community, the economic community or common market, and the Euratom community.

Guests included British Ambassador and Lady Ormsby Gore, Canada's Ambassador Fritchie, Luxembourg's Ambassador Heisbourg, Donna Julia Brambilla, Representative and Mrs. Dante Fascell, the Francis Spaldings, and Mrs. Morris Cafritz.
